What: PITT #116

Where: Bootleggers - 403 Semple St Pittsburgh, PA 15213

When: 9/29 @ 6:30 pm

I’m tired of all these millennials bragging about their PITTH3 trail count. They forget who were the original trail whores, Defender and myself. Back in the day, when we founded PITTH3, we had to hare just about every trail because no one else wanted to. Where were they then? Probably on their high school lunch break eating salty pretzels! I have half a mind to start haring every other week just to teach these youngsters a lesson. My reign of terror will be like a mushroom cloud! Bwahahahahaha!

So listen up you wankers! Come to trail at Bootleggers on September 29 so that aspiring trail whore (and millennial) Gay Horse Dancer, Spermit, and myself can put you where you belong, below me on the trails hared count.

Trail #116 Review by Major Pecker

It was wing night at Bootleggers when we all gathered to get ready for a lovely trail through Oakland. Filling my belly with wings right before a run was an excellent decision that I definitely did not regret soon afterward. We were all surprised when a long haired, bearded hippie by the name of Golden Showers made a surprise appearance. Apparently he got released from “prison” earlier than expected and was raring to bring Zippy on trail (who made his presence known in the best way he knows). We sent the hares on their way and shortly thereafter followed them through South Oakland.

It was an uneventful trip through the clean, beautiful student slum that is Oakland, and we had our first beer stop overlooking scenic I-376 (and I guess the Mon as well). It had poured before trail, but so far things had been pretty dry. We were all enjoying the cool evening weather, little did we know what mother nature had in store for us later in the night... (FORESHADOWING!). From the beer stop we ran down to Fifth Avenue, and recklessly (and, fortunately, wrecklessly) crossed over to a favorite abandoned staircase and clambered up it... only to find that this definitely wasn’t where trail was headed. Furthermore, the shiggy was waist-deep and full of jagers. Fortunately, The Black Clap found some trail heading up the under-construction Birmingham Bridge, and we got to use the construction cables to climb our way up.

We started heading up the streets of the hill district just as a light rain started coming down. We weren’t on the streets for long, however, as the hares decided to show us precisely how the hill district got its name. Fortunately, about half the pack had headlamps, because we were crawling through the dirt, broken glass, and tires (not to mention abundant shiggy) to get all the way to the top of the hill. Right as we were nearing the top, Potty Guard managed to fall into a pile of broken bottles (and I assume needles) on lovely hepatitis hill (RIP in peace PG). Fortunately, at the apex of the hill we were all rewarded with another delicious beer stop. It was here that the rain started to come down in buckets...watering down our watery PBR even more.

We, understandably, chased the hares out quickly from the stop, and definitely waited the full 10 minutes before we went after them. I don’t know if they had intended a longer trail, but everyone was thrilled that it was a very quick and direct route to circle. What we weren’t so thrilled about was waiting in the pouring rain for the beer to show up for like 10 minutes... come on guys, it was an abandoned parking lot, why didn’t you just park the car back there?? While we were waiting to start circle, Bubba Drunk found a (sadly empty) bottle of Oxy, just showing how lovely the neighborhood is up there. We had a good circle, blaming the RA for the weather (read the charter, Potty!) and making the hares drink for not finding a place with some cover for our circle. Shitty trail guys.

Trail #117

Who: Major Pecker & Lost in the Bush

What: A hash, dummy

When: Thursday, 10/13, 6:30 PM

Where: Coach's Bottleshop and Grill, 3105 Banksville Rd, Pittsburgh, PA 15216

Why: Some people just want to watch the world burn

How: With style and grace, I guess?

Sidewalks? Where we're going we won't need sidewalks! Join Lost in the Bush and Major Pecker as they lead you on a romp through the south hills, starting in Banksville, one of the few coveted "zero PITT trails" neighborhoods left. We'll be starting out of Coach's Bottle Shop - parking is plentiful and Thursday night is burger night. Get ready for a good mix of shiggy, pavement, and only a 10% chance of getting shot at by a bow hunter. Maybe don't wear your deer costume to this trail. Feel free to bring your dogs, but maybe think twice about letting them off leash.

We'll be meeting as per usual at 6:30, so come and bring your drinkin' liver with you. Also as per usual, five dolla make you holla, so bring at least one Lincoln to trail with you.

Coach's is keeping the kitchen open late for us and its burger night!

Trail #117 Review by Tight E

So there we were (No Shit!) sitting in traffic by the West End Bridge. Google maps indicated an accident on the Ft. Pitt Bridge so we took a detour hoping to avoid traffic...boy were we wrong. What should have been a 30-minute drive turned into a 60-minute drive and all the hope and excitement I had for a trail starting in a neighborhood not yet hashed in by PITT was long gone and replaced with complete and utter hatred for the south hills. We arrived just before on-out to a hoard of hashers waving five dollar bills at me. Moaning Lisa even coughed up and extra five to pay for the ever-hash case delinquent Golden Showers.

Once we were on-out, we immediately lost momentum as we got to the intersection with Banksville Rd. After waiting for what seemed like forever, the light changed and we ran through the neighborhood of Banksville for all of a ½ mile before leaving the city limits and traversing through Green Tree, Mt. Lebanon, Dormont, and all kinds of terrible South Hills suburbs. Although, we did get off road a decent amount so I guess it's not all bad.

Almost as soon as we entered the woods, we were abruptly stopped. I thought perhaps this was an ill-placed shot stop, but alas it was just that Lost in the Bush had been caught by the pack and we were giving him a few minutes to catch up.

Finally, we ended up at Dormont Park where we had a long drawn out circle full of unintelligible accusations and failed song attempts. We were having a good old time and had just start giving out commemoratives when we were visited by some of Dormont's finest. Our visitor, TMI, went up with Shameless Cussy to sweet talk the cops as the pack cleaned up and headed back the bar where it was Burger Night and people actually stuck around and hung out.

Shit Trail.
